My character as a racer is well established; I won the colt's purse at Bladensburg of twenty guineas; I won a fifty guinea purse at Baltimore, a fifty guinea purse at Annapolis and a fifty guinea purse at Hagerstown. I never lost a race but the last I run at Alexandria, which was owning to my being badly shod, as I lost all my plates before I got in. The small lots fronting on Vine and Callowhill streets, on the west side of Schuylkill Second street, and the large lots containing whole or half or quarter squares, some of them bounded on the west by Schuylkill and the upper ferry road including some fine quarry lots on Schuylkill: the whole containing about 140 acres, and formerly known by the name of Springsbury; bounded on the north by Francis street, extending from the Ridge road to Schuylkill, crossing the canal, on which several of the lots will give fronts.

Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, December 6.

Mr. Pitt's Speech on the Finances

In the house of commons, on the 4th of December, Mr. Pitt brought forward his new plan for the taxing of INCOME, by the means of which, no further addition (after the present year) will be made to the national debt, while that debt will be continually diminishing by the operation of the sinking fund—The minister went into a very minute detail of every branch of the extensive and important subject, after which he concluded with the following remarks.

In the mode of applying the money so collected there would be two ways—it might be either by paying off the sum borrowed last year, and then by borrowing an equal sum so paid off for the service of this year, or by applying it to the service of the present, and letting it stand mortgaged for the discharge of what would exceed the sum which the sinking fund of last year would pay off. But before he stated any thing of the amount of the loan, supposing ten millions to be the amount of the produce of the tax, he wished it to commence from the 5th of April next; and he proposed that the assessed taxes should be repealed from the same date. The assessed taxes became due on the 1st of February: and the differences of the dates from which the assessed taxes and the property tax would become become due, threw a balance of 700,000l. in favor of the present year; that would give a sum of 10,700,000l. But it must be recollected, that the whole was not applicable to the supply of the year; for the interest of eight millions borrowed last year, was payable from the assessed taxes, and consequently was chargeable on this tax, which came in lieu of the assessed taxes. There was also to be added the interest of the loan which must be borrowed this year. When this was deducted from the amount it would leave a balance of 9,200,000l. as applicable to the service of the year. This sum, added to the others appropriated for the service of the supplies, would leave 14 millions as the sum to be provided for by loan. Of this 14 millions, 4½ millions would be discharged by the operation of the sinking fund; the residue 9½ millions would be added to the national debt and would be the only addition to the national debt.

This statement gave a general view of the whole sum to be raised as applicable to the service of the year. It would not be necessary for him to persuade the house to adopt his opinion, or rather to adhere to those principles which had received their decided and warmest support during the last session of parliament. The great and serious consequences which had resulted most beneficially for the country, spoke more strongly in favor of the measures than any arguments which he could use. It had not only supported us under the pressure of expence, but it had circumscribed the hopes of our enemy; it had shewn them we were invulnerable in the part where they chiefly directed their attacks, and where they hoped most sensibly to wound us. The distress of our finance was the circumstance that the most elated our enemies, and aggravated the fears of the timid among ourselves; but it now clearly appeared, that however exorbitant the pretences of our enemy, or however enormous their means, yet we still rose superior to every effort.—True it was, that many thought we were verging to that period when we must be obliged to adopt new means of resource, and in the execution of those plans they foresaw, or thought they foresaw, danger, difficulty, and dismay. But we had tried other methods, and the result had been, that we had succeeded beyond our most sanguine hope—the result had proved, that we had the means of rising superior to all our difficulties. That after all the burthens of a six years war of unprecedented severity, we had seen new means tried and new plans adopted, whereby a vigorous exertion of the nation, the hopes of the enemy had been destroyed, public credit again revived, our fears were turned into confidence, despondency was silenced, and all our hopes confirmed.

These great effects had been produced by the bounty of Providence; but of the instruments which had produced those changes the most striking had not the most effect. There were circumstances which did not attract the attention, but which nevertheless had most powerful operation in producing a turn in the events of the country. The deeds performed by our armies had been eminent, brilliant and glorious—The lustre and successes of our naval arms, had, if possible, raised the character of the British navy beyond every former period; nor was it with a design of depreciating their merits that he gave to other circumstances more important consideration. The naval glory of the country was a theme congenial to the heart of an Englishman; it was bringing to a point the resources of the country, and shewed its power and energy in the fairest point of view. Let it not be supposed he meant to detract from their great and important service; but it was important for that house to carry their views still further. True it was our fleets had produced a change in the face of Europe; true it was it had been produced by the judgment, skill, and energy of a naval officer, whose abilities, resolution and perseverance, were aided by the zeal, order and unconquerable vigour of British seamen. True it was that glorious victory had averted the storm which was gathering, and ready to burst upon the continent. It had saved the distant possessions of the country; it had given salvation to some nations on the Continent, and afforded the means of salvation to all, if they would profit by them. But the house must recollect the power which gave energy to that force: They must not forget the means which enabled us to send fleets into those quarters of the world where heretofore we scarcely ever ventured to do it. The house must recollect, that the soul of these enterprizes, the vital spirit which animated them, was in the permanency of our resources—And whence arose those resources? In the profound wisdom, the unshaken firmness, and inflexible perseverance of parliament, with that unabated zeal, with that disinterested magnanimity, with that public spirit, which characterized the British nation, was not content merely with saving themselves, but they afforded to the rest of the world an opportunity of vindicating their insulted honour, and restoring themselves to that rank from which they had been degraded. The wisdom of parliament had called forth the radical strength of the country; and therefore he felt no difficulty in asking what the zeal of the country had voluntarily given. He felt no hesitation in asking a small part as a salvage, for restoring ourselves and the rest of Europe. But had we rested satisfied with having found resources, and done no more?—We were considered as a mercantile country; the spirit of commerce was supposed to be so transfused into us, that pacific purposes, and the desires of increasing the profits of our capital, had absorbed all our military ideas, and obliterated from our memory the sturdy character of our ancestors. But although we had with energy raised the necessary supplies, and had paid every attention to our commercial interests, yet our character had suffered no diminution in military spirit.

On the spur of the occasion the nation had come forward with martial order, true magnanimity, and with enthusiastic military zeal, that had at last put us on a level with the most military nations of the continent; at the same moment also we had accompanied it not with a desertion of our commercial interest, but with an increase and extension of them unprecedented in the history of the country. This is what we had seen in the course of the present year. Though we had been deserted by all the world, we had continued the war with more vigor and success then ever. If the great and splendid success which had attended our arms had been the occasion of temporary deprivations—If we had purchased them by a suspension of some advantages, there was not any one who would regret the sacrifice; but when, as was the case, we enjoyed all our advantages and our successes together, when our line of duty so much coincided with our interests, there could not be a moment's hesitation in the breast of any man to follow up the system, whose beneficial effects were so visible, and whose advantages were so sensibly felt. He could hardly conceive it possible that there was any necessity for going into details to induce that house to persevere in a plan by which we had shewn to all the world and convinced our enemies, whatever were the hopes they entertained, that we at least could continue the struggle as long as either the honor or the interest of the country demand it. We should feel, upon reflection, that every maxim of prudence with regard to our interest requires a perseverance in the system we had adopted. He should not now go over the ground which he went over, of stating the ultimate œconomy of such a plan—that of raising within the year a large portion of the supplies for the year: let it be enough to state, that of what money was borrowed, 1-12th part must be annually furnished for the defraying of the annual interest. This would be found, upon comparison with the present measure, to bring threefold charges upon the country—that is, as in the proportion of three to one. If such advantages resulted to the country from an œconomical view of the subject, without taking into the scale the political advantages of the measure, he was sure he need not urge much to persuade the committee to support a system so advantageous. They would not, by an adherence to prejudices, object to a disclosure of property, where the commissioners were sworn to secrecy. He trusted they would not deprive themselves of an advantage which must extend its benefits equally to the landed gentleman, the farmer, the trader, the artizan, the manufacturer, and more particularly to the latter class, for the prosperity of the country and the stability and security it enjoyed. But it was not on a view of general economy alone that the question was important, it would be more evident if we were not determined to shut our eyes to past experience. Taking the average number of years as to the probability of war, supposing they would be equal hereafter to what they had been since the peace of Aix la Chapelle, and the history of mankind afforded strong presumption that such a melancholy calculation would be too true, consider then what would be the situation of the country if we adhered to the old system of borrowing for the supplies of the year, and that the present system was not adopted. That amount of tax which now would be only temporary, would in that case be permanent, entailed upon their descendants a lasting burthen. If the question was looked at in that point of view, it would alone be sufficient to decide it. Having thus considered the question in an economical and financial point of view, let us next look at the questions as affecting the permanent interest of the country.

It had been the opinion of many, that because we inherited a burthen from our ancestors we ought without consideration to throw it again forwards on our posterity. But if instead of anticipating the revenue, our forefathers had been content to adopt the present plan, instead of paying twenty four millions of permanent taxes which we now paid, a much less sum of temporary taxes would answer all the demands of the year. If the house considered well this point, they could hardly think we ought to throw the burthen on posterity. If we continued in the system of enlarging our debt, after the old mode, at the end of six years war, supposing it to be equally expensive with the present, instead of 10 millions of temporary taxes, we should have 30 millions of permanent taxes to provide for.

But if the present plan was adopted, taking into consideration the operation of the sinking fund, at the close of 30 years the tax now proposed, with the sinking fund at the height it would then arrive at, would be able to defray the expences of any war. If therefore, feeing the dictates of neceſſity called for ſuch a meaſure, by which we ſaved ourſelves from many dangerous conſequences—not only ſo, but laid the foundations of a ſyſtem which had in its conſequences the effect of raiſing this country to an exalted pitch of grandeur and opulence—he was ſure that he addreſſed thoſe who would not be influenced by narrow or partial conſiderations—he addreſſed men who carried their views to remote poſterity—whoſe conſiderations went beyond their own immediate lives, and who were influenced by their deſire to ameliorate the condition of their children.—The conſiderations were enough to determine them, but they would conſider alſo, that they were not determining only for this nation— they would not forget that the deliberations of a Britiſh parliament were not only regarded with anxiety by their own countrymen, but alſo by the reſt of Europe. The ſurrounding nations looked to us either to raiſe their hopes or deſtroy their confidence.—We alone by our domeſtic wiſdom, had ſecured the means and held the power of averting that torrent which had too long deſtroyed the peace of ſurrounding Nations, and in turn had threatened with ſubverſion the liberties of each of them.

A regard to our own ſituation, a deſire of preſerving the liberties of poſterity, would not ſuffer us to ſhrink from principles, which, though adopted in the time of neceſſity, were even now rewarded with the moſt beneficial effects.—The benefits, indeed, reſulting from them, crowded round us, and were felt by every one who had the honour to call himſelf a ſubject of Great Britain.

FROM JAMAICA PAPERS.

KINGSTON, FEB. 2.

A letter of a recent date from Barbadoes, mentions that a conſiderable number of troops have been ſent from France to Cayenne, with ſome views, it is ſuppoſed, againſt Demerara; but in order to defeat their purpoſe, a detachment of 300 men has been ſent from Barbadoes to reinforce that ſettlement. The ſame letter mentions that two French 44 gun ſhips, and 12 ſtout privateers, have arrived at Guadaloupe from France. On their paſſage they captured an Engliſh ſhip, which was retaken and ſent to Martinique.

Since the departure of Victor Hughes for France, Admiral Harvey has ſent a cartel with a number of negroes on board that had been taken from eſtates by him, to ſerve on board his privateers. The new governor of Guadaloupe has, on the receipt of them, ſent them back to the proprietors they belong to, and aſſured Admiral Harvey, that ſuch deſcriptions of people would never be employed in the like manner in future.

February 9.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Barbadoes, dated Dec. 10, 1798.

"I am very ſorry to inform you the French have landed a conſiderable number of troops at Cayenne, and alſo at Guadaloupe; in their way they took a ſhip and ſent her for the latter place, which veſſel was taken by one of our frigates and ſent into Martinique; ſhe gave a particular account. The frigate met two French 44's and a lugger, which gave her a broadſide; ſhe immediately made the beſt of her way to the Admiral, and informed him thereof, and before any veſſels could be ſent after them they got into Guadaloupe. It is feared that thoſe ſhips, and a veſſel called L'Agreeable, belonging to Mr Barton of this place, which they have captured and fitted out with 24 guns and 200 men, are now to the windward, and will do a deal of miſchief to our trade. To-morrow go from hence 300 troops to Demerara, as it is thought the French meditate an attack on that place, and it is ſuppoſed the troops at Guadaloupe intend to make an attack on ſome of our iſlands. Several other veſſels have alſo been captured by the enemy and ſent into Oronoque."

Letters of the 18th December, found on board the Spaniſh Polacre, which arrived laſt week, ſtate that Port Mahon in the iſland of Minorca, capitulated to the Britiſh forces on the 16th November, and that the garriſon marched out with the honors of war; alſo, that two Spaniſh frigates and a ſloop of war were taken in the road. The ſame letters mention, that the Directory had informed the Court of Spain, that any part taken by it in the meditated coalition againſt France would be conſidered as a declaration of war againſt the Republic.

A gentleman who arrived in town laſt evening from Hærlahey's, where a meeting of a number of the diſſatisfied perſons from the counties of Bucks, Northampton, and Montgomery, was held on Monday, informs us, that at that meeting (which conſiſted of about two hundred perſons) a diſpoſition of unconditional ſubmiſſion to the laws of the United States was uniformly manifeſted; and that, ſo far from reſiſtance, the parties who were arreſted by the marſhal, and afterwards reſcued, are ſome of them now on their way to this city. By the report of a committee from the ſeveral counties, a reſolution correſponding with the above was entered into.

Our informant adds, that he had converſed with Fries, who was one of the principals of theſe miſguided people, and that he declared his determination to ſubmit to the proper authorities. He alſo believes the ſame determination was prevalent amongſt all who were at the meeting; ſome of whom were from that part of Northampton where the greateſt violence prevailed.

He alſo ſays, that Meſſrs. Kern, Hartzell, and Coolbach are expected in town this day, when we may expect to be more particularly informed of the proceedings of the meeting. [Ame. Daily Adv.]

The accounts from Northampton, agreeably to the beſt information we have been able to obtain, are extremely contradictory. Letters from that county, ſtate, that Hartzell, one of the perſons abovementioned, having called a meeting of the rebels at Quaker Town, on which occaſion he exhorted them to ſubmit to the laws, ſo far from having any influence over them, was violently inſulted.

Blair MacClenachan, ci-devant member of Congreſs, has given notice to his creditors that he intends to take the benefit of the act made for the relief of inſolvent debtors.

In Vermont, things are differently managed. If the publication in a newſpaper of a notice to his creditors would cancel all his debts, Matthew Lyon, it is ſaid, would return to his conſtituents. As affairs are at preſent, however, he prefers ſojourning in Virginia, to being hemmed up in a Vergennes' priſon, with no more of the light of heaven than what is admitted by a half-moon cut in the door, and no ſociety but Volney's Ruins.

If the inſurrection in Northampton is in reality ſubſiding, and its agents retiring to their ſhells, what is to follow? Are the perpetrators of ſo daring an outrage on the laws honor, and dignity of the government to eſcape with impunity? Is the mere profeſſion of a diſpoſition to ſubmit to the laws in future, an atonement for their late violent infraction?

FRIES, the preſent hero of revolt in Northampton county, it is ſaid, was formerly a vendue-crier in this city.

It is a fact, that not one of thoſe individuals who are ſo outrageous in their oppoſition to the houſe and land tax, in Northampton, have property taxable by that law!

The captain of the Democrat, taken by Commodore Barry, is one Williams, a notorious pirate, who formerly commanded the privateer Amor de la Patria, and is an Iriſhman.

From the Vergennes Gazette.

WASHINGTON'S NATAL DAY

Was celebrated by a number of reſpectable inhabitants of this town, and its vicinity, in a manner evincive of the firmeſt attachment to that venerable hero, whom the voice of UNITED MILLIONS will ever proclaim the SAVIOUR OF HIS COUNTRY. Notwithſtanding the inclement wintry ſky, and the hoarſe howlings of the mountain ſtorm, a company of artillery, under the command of captain Samuel Walker, handſomely equipped and completely uniformed, gladdened the eye of the true American, by their martial appearance, and military manœuvres. After proclaiming, by the cannon's mouth, the unrivalled merits of "Columbia's favorite Son," a "band of brothers," at the inn of Mr. Oliver C. Wyman, partook of the feaſt of Federaliſm. Here were joined veteran officers, and ſoldiers, who fought the battles of American independence, officers, civil and military, and a bright concourſe of citizens, rejoicing in their Adams, their Waſhington and their country. Succeeding a choice collation of the beſt viands the ſeaſon affords, while every eye beamed rapture, and the peal of hilarity, and burſt of applauſe reſponded every ſentiment. The following patriotic Toaſts were drank.

1. George Waſhington. May the arm of our Waſhington be terrible to traitors, as were the thunders of OMNIPOTENCE to the arch Democrat in heaven.

[14 cheers and Waſhington's March.]

2. John Adams. May that "Rock on which the ſtorm may beat," long continue the chief corner ſtone of the Federal Building. 14 cheers and Preſident's March.

3. Lyon. The ſpring halt to the bog trotter. 3 groans and the rogue's march from drum and fife.

4. Hemp and United Iriſhmen. May the former conduct the latter. 3 cheers.

5. Gallatin. May the hand of the hangman imprint Finis to the works of the ſeditious Genevan, before he can publiſh a new edition of the whiſky inſurrection. 6 cheers.

6. Tar and feathers to the French tories. 3 cheers and Yankey Doodle.

7. The nerve that feels for its country, and the honeſt hand, with the naked ſword. 6 cheers.

8. May bullet holes admit light, were federaliſm cannot ſhine. 3 cheers.

9. The ſword, the keel and the ploughſhare—May each ſupport the other. 3 cheers.

10. Clark the thief, Lyon the wooden ſword bearer, Haſwell the poetaſter, the illuminated Jefferſon and the murderer Merlin. May they form a French directory in pandemonium the the ſeat of democracy. 3 cheers and ca-ira.

11. The honeſt, but deluded, among our antifederal countrymen. May the mantle of charity cover the faults of thoſe democrats, whoſe erring heads are unconnected with depraved hearts. 3 cheers.

12. May the Dagon of Faction fall proſtrate before the ark of Federaliſm. 3 cheers.

13. May Virginian ſlave drivers ceaſe to theorize the "Rights of Man," till they ceaſe to tyrannize over their ſable brethren.—9 cheers.

14. The American Fair. May they never laviſh one ſmile on the enemies of our country. 9 cheers.

"Saw you my hero."

The proceedings of the day were concluded by the feſtive American Songs of "Hail Columbia," "Adams and Liberty," and the "Rutland Patriotic Ode," performed and encored with the plaudits of a large concourſe of federal auditors. No accident intervened to mar the tranſports of the admirers of Waſhington; but all was worthy the day which uſhered into exiſtence the Guardian Angel of America.

N. B. Majorities in the Legiſlatures of two of our ſiſter States, having ſhewn a diſpoſition to recede from the Federal Union, it was thought improper to compliment them on this occaſion. Fourteen toaſts only, were accordingly drank.
